Clubs Seek Help For Ball Field

At 2 a.m. Sunday, you lose. You lose an hour to Daylight Saving Time. You turn your clocks and watch ahead one hour. But don't worry. This fall, you'll get the hour back.

It may be a long time to wait for that extra hour's sleep, n'est-ce pas?

In the interim, there'll be more daylight for farm work, lawn mowing, fishing, golfing, and whatever else a light hour a day is good for in summer.

It may even be incentive for 111 to get in an extra hour of tennis, knowing, of course, it is not a popular sport.

ASTRO-PHYSICS MYTHOLOGY?

The Christian Science Monitor of April 17 carries a cartoon by Dawes which says in jest what the space era stirs in many minds.

It shows a professor or research director talking to three collaborators in conference. Behind them are chalked notations on a blackboard listing equations, theories on the universe's origin, quasars and pulsars, among recognizable terminology of physics theorists.

Says he: "Well, gentlemen, we've discarded the 'Big Bang' and 'Pulsating' theories of the origin of the universe--what do you think of 'Armonk the Sun God throwing a handful of glowing pebbles into the sky?' "

It seems we're back to where it all began, which Genesis covers in great, sweeping prose.

And that's where this column ends, lacking the space for such thousands of historic words.

City Council Tuesday evening heard a request from local civic clubs for help in developing baseball park; a report of complaints about pigs; and discussed applications for a street superintendent.

Edward Demerson, representing the Willing Workers Progressive Club, told the Council that this club and two others want to restore the present ball field on West 12th Street.

Needs for the ball field include: two more lights for the outfield, repair or replacement of bleachers, new screen for the backstop, a general cleanup of high weeds and vines, drinking water, and restrooms.

Mayor Perrin noted that in a prior discussion with club members, he told them that the city does not furnish anything but lights for the Little League ball park -- all labor and materials for buildings, etc. had been supplied by individuals and the LL organization.

In the discussion that followed, Council agreed to help the group if they organize to do the work, and Demerson assured Councilmen that plenty of labor was available and waiting to start work on the project.

He also said plans for protecting restrooms and other facilities at the park were part of the project.

The mayor appointed Councilman Lawrence Zotz to work with the clubs on the plans, and reported an offer of help from Gene Smitherman, veteran LL organizer and leader. City will mow weeds, and will help with finances after project estimates and available funds are reported.

HOGS AND PIGS

A check by city officials on the pig population in a residential area revealed 72 hogs and pigs kept in pens or yards in a two-block area on West 8th St.

The check was made following a complaint by a resident of the area. No action was taken pending either the resident's signing of a complaint, or presenting a petition signed by other residents.

Councilman Zotz noted that several other areas in the city have numerous pigs penned in yards.

STREET SUPERINTENDENT

Council voted to hire Michael Foote of Stephenville for street superintendent to replace J. B. Earle, whose resignation was scheduled for April 1, but who is remaining on duty pending a successor.

However, Mayor Perrin reported later Tuesday night that Foote was unavailable for the job when he was contacted following the meeting.

Foote was the second applicant hired by the Council this month. The first man hired in early April changed his mind after he had accepted the job because his wife didn't want to move.

ST. MONICA FESTIVAL

St. Monica's Ladies Society will sponsor their spring festival today, (Thursday) at Simon George Hall. Supper served starting at 5:30 p.m. with games and other activities planned.

Urban Renewal Plans Clear Ft. Worth Region

Washington HUD Views Proposal

Cameron's proposal for downtown urban renewal is in the Washington office of Housing and Urban Development.

A letter, dated April 17, advised the Cameron Urban Renewal Agency in an opening paragraph:

"I am pleased to inform you that the Part I loan and Grant application for the above-identified urban renewal project (Project No. Tex R-108, Downtown Parts I Loan and Grant Application) has been approved. In addition, the reservation of capital grant funds available for this project has been extended, in the reduced amount of $617,-535. This reservation represents the maximum amount of capital grant assistance for which a loan and grant contract may be executed but is not a commitment to execute such a contract."

Letter to A. E. Matula, executive director of the Cameron Urban Renewal Agency, was signed by J. Elmore Hudson for Jack D. Herrington, assistant regional administrator for renewal assistance.

Cameron Urban Board Chairman Albert McCullin, Sr., said the letter also authorizes start of Part II Loan and Grant Application, setting a deadline of August 17, 1970, for "submission of an acceptable Part II Loan and Grant Application."

An accompanying diagram, a duplicate of the drawing in the Cameron Project application, about the thickness of a city telephone directory, shows the area which is included in the Part I phase of the downtown Cameron project.

It is substantially the same as previously proposed, except an area north of the northern renewal boundary to West Fourth St. was taken out because of increased costs, as estimated, to improve streets, curbing and buildings.

The Part II program includes detailing plans to execute the Part I proposals, calling for a "Town Meeting," approval of the Cameron City Council and other work which is considerably less than the enclosures required for Part I approval in Fort Worth, Matula said.

Original grant reserved, and still uncommitted until final HUD approval in Washington of the submitted Part I and approval of Part II, was $653,812.

But as the letter from Fort Worth HUD officials notes, The $617,535 total "represents the maximum amount of capital grant assistance for which a loan and grant contract may be executed, but is not a commitment. . ."

Matula said the City of Cameron's portion, already designated by earmarking certificates of deposit or pledged through "in - kind" contribution, would be about one-fourth the $617-535 figure.

Additional moneys are available through HUD to be paid directly to property owners whose buildings are purchased through the Cameron Urban Renewal Agency, Matula said. They are not a part of the $617,535 figure.

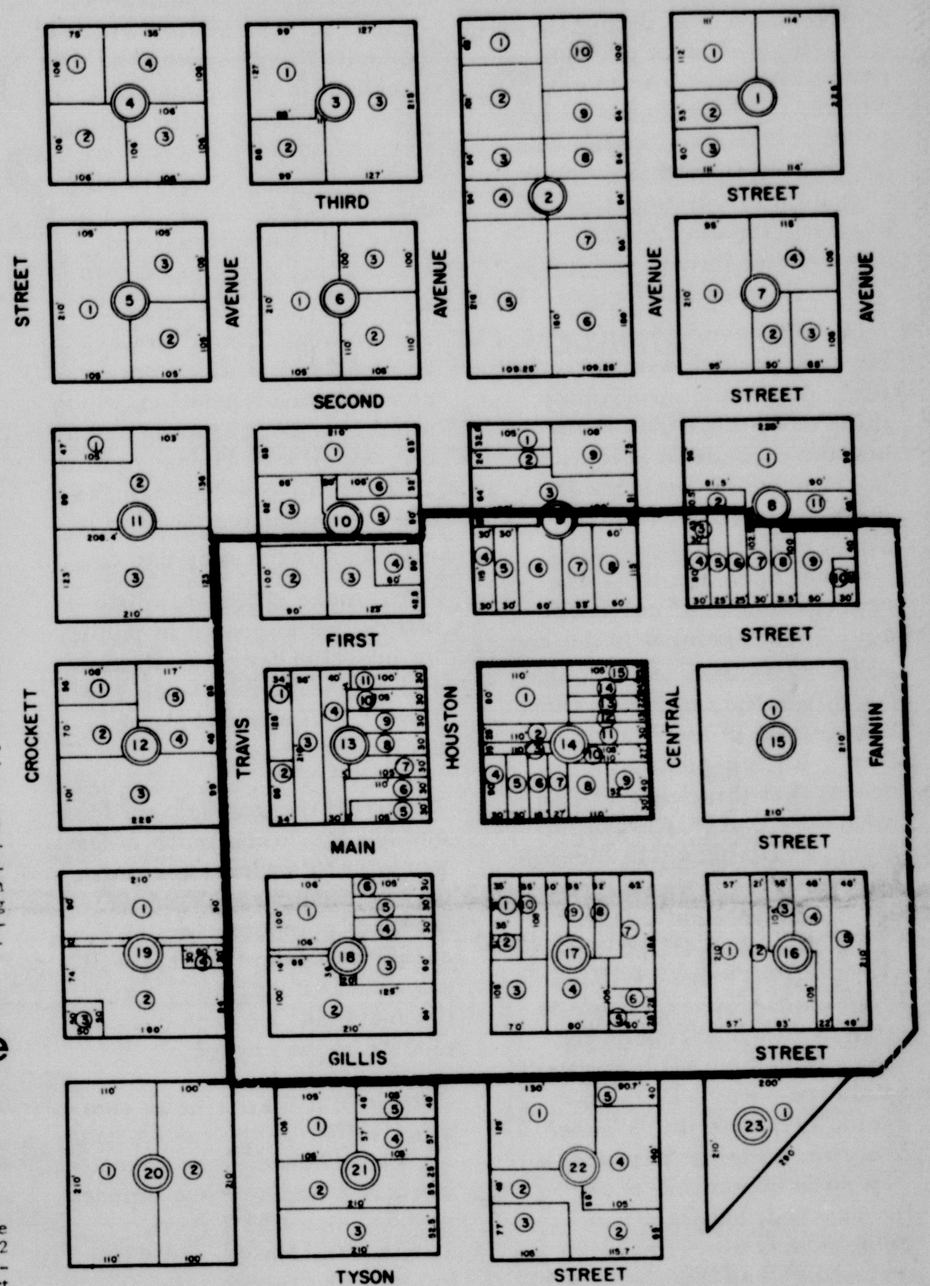
In addition, property owners are eligible for assistance funds for moving, up to about $2,500.

McCullin, two weeks ago named the 1969 McCullin Civic Award winner, said the Fort Worth approval was the critical step in the continuing process of modernizing downtown Cameron, now just about a nine-block area of buildings, streets and curbing.

He and Matula said more work is involved in preparation of the Part II executive proposal, but the main effort was in Part I.

McCullin said he was expecting to hear an acknowledgment from Washington this week.

The accompanying drawing shows the area designated for urban renewal in downtown Cameron, a project first discussed in a first Cameron town meeting in 1965, the outline of the proposal approved by a 3 to 1 margin in 1966.



Clocks Move Up Sunday For DST

It's that time again -- to move clocks forward one hour at 2 a.m. Sunday, when Daylight Saving Time again goes into effect for summer.

Most state legislatures approved the bill setting DST in 1967, but a few have voted for exemption from the rule.

Efforts to get the Texas Legislature to exempt the state from DST have failed, and this year the State Democratic Party turned down a proposal to place a referendum on the May 2 ballot.

Clocks will turn back one hour on the last Sunday in October.

Apollo 13 and 'Earth Day' . . . .

Our three Apollo 13 astronauts are heroes of the hairiest space trip of them all.

During a time of growing public disinterest in moon flights, the best that is in us earth people (Wednesday was Earth Day) turned immediate compassion and empathy toward astronauts Lovell, Swigert and Haise.

It says to us that people more than ever identify with heroes, anguish with them in their plight and now something new, think with them and the incredible scientific back-up which analyzes the complexity of such a mission and delivers solution.

These men are the most representative of our space age. Their example is the one which will ultimately resolve the difficulties bringing about recognition of an "Earth Day", its life-sustaining focus on that thin layer of atmosphere and that thinner layer of tillable earth through which and from which these heroes passed and returned.

These men are also Americans, military and civilian. It seems NASA leadership is bridging normal reason for developing such sophisticated hardware--war--by introducing civilians into a space program so large in peace.

It says something of the future. And that future is being reached by American technology and genuine American heroes, mindful of their example in high-minded exchange of information with our opposites in Moscow. And that exchange would occur, no doubt, if Peking were willing even to let people watch on what television is available there.

We tell ourselves--and Europeans, our progenitors, wonder at our disenchantment--what "fools" we are to do so many things openly, chancing condemnation, which often is ours, chancing disaster, which was almost Apollo 13's, because we Americans are fair minded enough to let men show what they can do.

We make collossal mistakers, we angonize in public, we question every institution, and yet, we deliver men like Lovell, Swigert and Haise back to earth.

For all the struggle we find our heroes, when much of the world stifles theirs for politics or mediocrity. And we find this composite world, called the United States, willing to risk everything, "all the marbles" at each calculated moon voyage.

The best that is in us can resolve our problems as long as men, backed up by space expertise and courage-minded people, men like Lovell, Swigert and Haise, are willing to make such a trip.

Longing For The Country . . .

Dr. Gallup's new finding that most Americans would live in a small town or on a farm if they had their choice --a reversal from as recently as four years ago-- suggests to our mind a growing yearning for the certainties of simple living. For many years most urbanites have settled for as much as suburbia could offer them of closer contact with the land and with neighbors. Now they seem to be reaching farther afield, tragically at the very time when opportunities for livelihood in small towns and on farms are fastest waning.

There is something to do with it, of course, in crime in the cities, the torments of traffic, the but-recent awareness of air and water pollution; but this rebirth of nostalgia for the land appears to us to go deeper than all that. Ronald Blythe, an English novelist and critic, writes in his book "Akenfield," a portrait of a millennium-old village in Suffolk, "The townsman envies the villager his certainties and, in Britain, has always regarded urban life as just a temporary necessity. One day he will find a cottage on the green and 'real values.'" He speaks of the almost religious intensity of the regard for rural life in this country speaks of the almost religious intensity of the regard for rural life in this country (Britain); and "the sense of guilt which so many people feel about not living on a village pattern."

Whatever its causes, the phenomenon may offer a source of salvation for American cities. Too much of our nation's population already lives in them, and too many more are crowding into them every year. At the extreme, New York is being spoken of as "unmanageable." . . .

If the Gallup poll is correct in estimating that only 18 Americans in 100 really want to to live in cities, the time is ripe for a rational and voluntary redistribution of our spiraling population--given the opportunity.

Schools' Drug Education Draws Barnes Challenge

By Vern Sanford

AUSTIN

Adequacy of planned public school education programs on the dangers of drug abuse drew a challenge last week from Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes as the war on narcotics increased in tempo.

Barnes told newsmen he feels the program can be "redeemed" and straightened out by the beginning of the next school year. He suggested that bona fide authorities on drugs and former addicts should be included among teacher - resource personnel.

Meanwhile, the Lieutenant Governor told a narcotics seminar for law officers and prosecutors that Texas is spending far too little money on drug law enforcement.

Gov. Preston Smith, in the opening address to the conference, said the primary obligation of law enforcement is to rid society of pushers who traffic in narcotics for profit. Smith also said education is the key weapon in fighting drug abuse by addicts and experimenters.

Barnes said the new school course on narcotics should be made as "personal" as possible. Both Smith and Barnes agreen that teaching must be done by those who know what they are talking about.

Lieutenant Governor believes that lowering of penalties for first - offense possession of marijuana to misdemanors would end the reluctance of juries to convict. He reported heavy response to his suggestion, and said that correspondence is running four-to-one in favor of lighter sentences. Pushers, he emphasized, should get tougher punishment than at present.

Spending for enforcement, the Lieutenant Governor claims, could be increased "200, 300 to 400 per cent" without undue burden on taxpayers -- by "re-evaluation of priorities."

ATTORNEY GENERAL RULES

State Board of Health may adopt reasonable rules and regulations relating to minimal equipment for ambulances, Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin has held.

In other recent opinions, Martin concluded that:

•Members of Chambers - Liberty Counties Navigation District are authorized to receive $25 a day or "reasonable per diem" for time spent on duty as fixed by county commissioners.

•Changes in boundaries of county election precincts may be made only during July and August terms of county commissioners' court and the month of September, 1970. Changes do not become effective until the following voting year. Voters in the new Bailey County precincts must vote in precincts where they are residents.

OIL PRODUCTION

Texas Railroad Commission trimmed statewide oil allowable for May to 64.5 per cent of potential.

Reduction follows four months at a high 68 per cent level. Commission said a restudy of the producing ability of Texas oil wells and increases in above-ground stocks of crude oil led to the cut-back.

May allowable will mean maximum production of 3,505,375 barrels a day, or 147,530 less than April. Estimated actual production will decline only about 43,750, Commission figures.

COURTS SPEAK

State Supreme Court held that an El Pasoan should be repaid his investment on a car repossessed by a finance company and resold, although the man claimed he was promised more time on payments. High court threw out punitive damages assessed against the finance company in a lower court, finding no proof of malice.

Fifth federal circuit court of appeals ordered Crosby Independent School District to implement a school desegregation pairing plan by June 1. District previously had been given until September 1.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

CATCH POLLUTERS, EARN $1,250

Rep. Henry S. Reuss (Wis.) ". . . The 1899 Refuse Act --33 U.S.C. 407--prohibits the dumping of refuse--which the courts have ruled include industrial pollutants--into waterways, except under permit issued by the Corps of Engineers.

"The report of the House Government Operations Committee issued on March 21, 1970 sets forth the little-known provisions of this act. Any citizen who has evidence of an industry polluting water without a corps permit may inform the U.S. attorney, whose duty under the statute is to "vigorously prosecute" the offender. The law provides that one-half of the maximum fine of $2,500 for each incident or day of violation must be paid to the citizen who gives information which leads to a conviction. Under a well-established principal of law, known as a qui tam action, where a statute provides a reward to the informer and the Government fails within a reasonable time to prosecute a violator, the informer may himself sue the violator in the name of the United States to collect the reward.

"I recently filed with the U.S. attorneys for the eastern and western districts of Wisconsin a list of 149 industries which have been pouring harmful refuse into Wisconsin's lakes and streams, without permits from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The refuse which has been dumped into these waters include chemical and biological refuse from paper-mills, canning companies, dairies, slaughter-houses, glue factories, and other industries.

"It is my intention to direct that the one-half of any fines payable to me as the person giving information which shall lead to conviction, shall be paid over to the appropriate agency of the Federal Government concerned with water pollution.

"I urge environmentalists of all ages to use this "handy kit" of antipollution procedures to help end industrial pollution of our waters. Other State and Federal laws on industrial water pollution are full of holes and hopelessly inadequate. . .

"I hope that public-spirited citizens will cover every river and lake in the country and take notes on who is polluting them. By turning the fines over to Federal water pollution authorities, we can be helping to pay for needed municipal waste treatment plants with the proceeds of action against the industrial violators. Between the two, this could be the first big victory of the Environmental Decade. . ." (Rep. Reuss' list of industrial polluters may be found on pages H2640-2 of Record #51.)

A GRASSROOTS COMMENT

We hope Rep. Reuss has his facts straight. His list of 149 industrial polluters contains the names of some of the best known industries in the country. To list a few would be unfair without including the complete list.

The water pollution problem has been studied, surveyed and buck-passed ad nauseam. If the ordinary citizen can get his hands on some of the fine money, maybe the problem could be moved off dead center. Just maybe.—J.C.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

Off and on over the years, in between newspapers, I've been working on a fence out here on this Johnson grass farm and was hard at it more or less the other morning when a neighbor stopped by and said:

"Still working on that fence, huh? How long you been at it? Must be 15 or 20 years now. My grandfather once told me a man should never start something he can't finish. See you later."

Not having a newspaper to read I sat down and thought about what he'd said. After long reflection—I have concluded it's just another of those old sayings, like what goes up is bound to come down, which was said by a man who never paid any taxes.

You follow the principle of not starting something you can't finish and see where you get. For one thing, we wouldn't have any highways, as I've never seen one yet that was finished. One end is worn out before the other end is completed, and if they're not widening it they're double-decking it or re-routing it.

Or take cities. There never was one that was finished and never will be, although of course this might be an argument proving people should never start something they can't finish. Some cities, I understand, are in as bad a shape as my fences.

Come to think of it, and reversing my field, most arguments, which can't be finished, should never have been started. They wouldn't have been either if people followed my rule: take positions but never defend them.

Or take Viet Nam. Some people say it shouldn't have been started because it can't be finished, and there are others who twist the old saying and say they don't want to finish what somebody else started.

Me, I always take the middle ground. If my neighbors will take care of my outside fences I'll take care of my middle ones.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Peril at the Drive-In

Not all the trials and tribulations at a drive-in movie take place on the screen. Sometimes, misfortune also befalls a member of the audience. If a patron does suffer an accidental injury, may he hold the management legally liable?

To begin with, the management has a basic duty to maintain the premises in safe and orderly condition. Take this case:

A drive-in had a special "KIDDY ZONE" where children could amuse themselves while their elders were watching the movie. On a roadway running alongside this zone, debris of all kinds was allowed to accumulate. One evening,

In a court test, the theater was held liable for the child's injury. The judge pointed out that similar incidents in the past had given the management plenty of warning that the littered roadway was a source of danger.

Furthermore, the management is supposed to enforce prudent rules of safety. In another case, a theater made no effort to keep its patrons from sitting outside their cars on warm evenings. Yet it provided no lighting for the aisles—and no attendants to guide the oncoming vehicles.

When a car struck a patron sitting near an aisle, the theater was held responsible. The court said the way the place was run, it was "a stage setting for tragedy."

Still, some mishaps are not fairly blamable on the management. Thus:

A patron heading for the snack bar tried to walk through the narrow space between a parked car and a listening post. Bumping into the connecting cord, he knocked the speaker box against a woman seated inside the car, inflicting an injury on her head.

The hapless woman never could locate the walker. So she decided to sue the theater instead, arguing that its arrangement of listening posts and connecting cords was a "dangerous condition."

However, the court held that the theater was no more at fault than she was. The judge said the management could reasonably assume that the average patron, knowing how a drive-in theater is set up, would have better sense than to walk into a cord.

Burglary Case Nets Probated Sentence For Dennis Earhart

In Milam County District Court on Friday, April 17, Dennis Earhart of Cameron was assessed a three-year-probated sentence by the Court, according to County Atty. John B. Henderson Jr.

Earhart pleaded guilty to the offense of burglary. One of the conditions of his probation was restitution for damages in the amount of $10.

The case involved the burglary of Ada Henderson School building on the night of January 15, 1970. Evidence in the case showed that Arnett Zelisko, principal of AH School, surprised Earhart while he was in the process of burglarizing the building.

RD Committee Readies For '70s

By J. D. Moore

The Milam County Rural Development Committee was organized in January of this year for the purpose of helping Milam county get ready for the "Seventies."

Actually, the Rural Development idea is a recommendation coming out of the thinking of the President, the Rural Affairs Council made up of the vice president, the secretary of Agriculture, Interior, Commerce, Housing and Urban Development, Labor, and Health, Education & Welfare, the director of the office of Economic Opportunity, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget and the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors.

On a State basis membership of this committee includes the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration, Rural Electrification, the State Extension Service and others involved in rural and urban development.

Locally, J. D. Moore is chairman, Wayne Mann, SCS, vice chairman; Henry N. Ivey, F.H.A., secretary.

Committee members include A.S.C.S., Public Health, Soil Conservation supervisors, Vo-Ag teachers, Homemaking teachers, the Extension staff, City and County governments, Chamber of Commerce officials, Industrial Foundation officers, our Senators and Representatives, utility company officials and their representatives, appraisors, and others interested in rural development.

The purpose of rural development is to create jobs, opportunities, community services, a better quality of living, and an improved social and physical environment in small cities, towns, villages, and farm communities in rural America.

The county committee meets on the 4th Friday of each month. The next meeting will be held in the Rockdale State Bank Conference Room on Friday, April 24, 2 p.m. Rockdale civic leaders are urged to attend the meeting.

FERTILIZE FARM PONDS

As a follow-up of vegetation control in farm ponds, a fertilizer application should be applied to increase the plankton which is the main food supply for small fish and water insects.

Most Texas waters respond to an initial treatment of 100 pounds of 20-20-5 analysis fertilizer per surface acre, according to Wallace Klussmann, Farm Pond Specialist at A&M. Follow up the initial fertilizer application with successive treatments of 20 to 40 pounds per acre at two week intervals until a desirable bloom has been reached.

The plankton bloom is sufficient when a person's cupped hand is not visible when the arm is emmersed in the water to elbow depth (about 18 inches). The bloom usually appears in one to five weeks after the beginning of the fertilization program, says Klussmann. Subsequent applications should be made only as needed to maintain bloom.

PONDS TREATED

Mr. and Mrs. Sevcik of Buckholts and Kenneth Hollas of Cameron, recently treated their farm ponds using one pound of Karmex to one surface acre of water. A properly managed farm pond can provide excellent fishing and serve as a source of recreation and income to the owner.

APHIDS

Watch for Aphids on flowers, shrubs and garden plants. Aphids are small, delicate, and more or less pear - shaped insects. They may be light green, up to green, and even black in color. Aphids have the highest reproductive potential of any insect due to the fact that they give birth to the young. This results in a very rapid build-up.

Tempers Flare Over Feed Grains Program Proposal

Tempers flared last week over House Agriculture subcommittee passage of a feed grain program that some farm groups called "a sell-out." (Bill outlined in April 16 in Cameron Herald).

Five national farm organizations, Farmers Union, National Grange, National Farmers Organization, Mid-Continent Farmers Ass'n., and National Association of Wheat Growers, oppose the program on wheat, feed grains and cotton.

Cong. W. R. Poage, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, says the bill gives farmers less than he hoped but concessions had to be made for passage. "I wish we could get more but all indications are that this is the best we are going to get," Poage said in his April 17 weekly letter.

Jay Naman, Texas Farmers Union President, issued a statement following subcommittee passage of the program saying it would "have the effect of distroying the parity concept, eliminating the farmers opportunity to balance supply with demand, eliminate the loan program as an effective device for farmer bargaining, and will substantially reduce farm income."

Robert Jungmann, president of the Milam County Farm Bureau, said they would not have a statement on the proposed legislation at this time. "The Farm Bureau is working on a substitute program to submit to Congress," Jungmann said.

Poage Defends

WASHINGTON

Chairman W. R. (Bob) Poage, D-Tex., of the House Committee on Agriculture, declaring passage of a general farm bill by Congress this year is vital, said enactment of a measure can be achieved only in there are concessions on the part of Administration and Congressional leaders and rural and urban lawmakers who hold differing views.

The Texan expressed this opinion in a statement released answering criticism directed at him and others who joined in voting subcommittee approval Wednesday (April 8) of a wheat and feed grains section for a farm bill. The criticism was contained in a release issued April 9 by John Scott, Chairman of the Steering Committee of the National Farm Coalition, a group of farm organizations.

The test of Chairman Poage's statement follows:

As I see it, the major duty of the Committee on Agriculture is to secure the passage of an effective farm bill. Obviously this can only be done through cooperation. The days in which the so-called "farm bloc" was sufficiently powerful to pass any legislation it wanted have long since passed. Unfortunately, some of our farm leaders seem to be living in a dream world of long ago in which they had the votes to pass whatever they felt was best for farmers.

I came to Congress just about the time the farm population was ceasing to be a controlling element. Today there are fewer than three million farms in the United States. It is estimated that the Census now underway will show a population of more than 203 million people. The Supreme Court has required State legislatures to create Congressional districts with the same number of people regardless of the area involved. There are not more than about 31 Members of the House who can be called "farm' Congressmen. There are about twice this number of Representatives who feel that their constituents want them to vote against all farm measures, with the thought that by so doing they can reduce the cost of living.

The Democrats have a majority in the House of Representatives, but the Democratic Leadership certainly cannot prevail upon anything like a majority of the House to support farm legislation. The same situation exists on the Republican side where about the same percentage of Members oppose farm legislation without regard to its provisions.

Obviously, neither the Republicans nor the Democrats can alone pass a farm bill. Neither the Agriculture Committee nor the Department of Agriculture has the power to pass legislation simply by presenting it. It is necessary to get votes from somewhere other than from "farm" districts. The only possibility I know of securing farm legislation is be securing the cooperation of our Committee and the Secretary of Agriculture, including the cooperation of the members of both parties. For a year and half many of us have seriously sought to schieve this cooperation.

I have not agreed with the viewpoint expressed by the largest of the farm organizations. The American Farm Bureau feels that a massive land retirement program with a minimum of government controls or supports would be desirable. Such a program does not seem to me to be in the best interests of agriculture. This program has been submitted to the Congress and rejected by the Committee. I appreciate the fact that the advocates of this program have recognized the sincerity of others, as I recognize the sincerity of these advocates. The Farm Bureau is not going to get its massive land retirement, but its members and its representatives have continued showing interest in securing a farm program.

A number of the smaller farm organizations have urged the payment of substantially larger government subsidies. Frankly, I have felt that if the American people are to continue to have the inexpensive food which they now enjoy, that aid to agriculture must be increased -- not decreased. I have felt that if we are justified in increasing the wages of government workers -- and an overwhelming majority of Congress has indicated that it believes we are -- we are also justified in increasing the income of those who provide the food and fiber for the American people. To this extent I agree with the views of the so-called Coalition of Farm Organizations, but I have yet to see any evidence whatever that there is any reasonable possibility of securing the kind of payments the Coalition seeks.

With no farm programs, I think it is clear that American farmers would rapidly sink to an even less favorable economic level. In other words, desirable as the Coalition program might be as an objective, none of its advocates seem to have any vague idea of how they can secure its passage, and without passage, this program is of course no more than "pie in the sky."

I think, on the other hand, that I see a real possibility of passage of a program which will maintain substantially the present income of farmers. The question then is not whether we would like to get $4 a bushel for wheat, 50¢ a pound for cotton, $2.50 a bushel for corn, but it becomes what is the very best that we can reasonably hope to get.

The Secretary of Agriculture has repeatedly stated that he would support legislation which would (for at least three years) maintain approximately the present level of government assistance for our farmers. I agree with the Coalition of Farm Organizations that I would rather have more. I have an idea Mr. Hardin himself would rather have more. But Mr. Hardin, like the farm organizations, is faced with the realities of budget limitations.

Apparently we have a chance of getting a bill passed which will result in a continuation of something around $3 billion a year government assistance to farmers. I don't consider this adequate, but I think the alternative is to get absolutely nothing. I believe that under those circumstances I owe my farmers an obligation to do what I can to get the $3 billion, and I am trying to do so, as are many other members of the Committee, both Democrats and Republicans.

Certainly the Committee has made concessions. So has the Secretary of Agriculture. I believe this is the only basis on which we can hope to develop helpful legislation. The Coalition of Farm Organizations which has made no concessions has charged those of us who have sought to secure a compromise with a "sell out" of grain producers. Let's see what this "sell out" involves. It involves a guarantee of $2.77 a bushel for the next three years for all domestically consumed wheat -- about 48 percent of the total. This is not a starvation price. It involves a support of $1.35 a bushel for 50 percent of the feed grain production. This figures out to be 8¢ a bushel more than the $1.14 support on 80 percent of production which the spokesmen for the Coalition had proposed.

Now if those of us who sought an effective compromise "sold out" any of the producers we must have gotten something for it. What did we get? I don't think that Chairman Scott meant to imply that we were bribed. Who would pay Members of Congress to seek a compromise of this kind rather than to insist on a deadlock? Certainly Mr. Scott used the term in a broad general sense, meaning that we got something we wanted for our people, and to that extent he is correct. We got the possibility of passing a bill, and it is that possibility of passage of a bill that he finds "completely unacceptable".

I long ago learned that it was better to get a part of something (and in this case a right substantial part) than to hold out and take all of nothing, and I think it is clear that all of nothing is exactly what is offered by the Coalition demands.

Naman Objects

Jay Naman of Waco, Texas Farmers Union President, released the following statement concerning the legislation on wheat, feed grains, and cotton approved by the subcommittees of the House Agriculture Committee in Washington.

"The three - year farm bill pertaining to wheat, feed grains, and cotton approved by the appropriate subcommittees of the House Agriculture Committee are consistent and follow a pattern which is in agreement with the recommendations of the Nixon Administration.

"The provisions of the legislation affecting these three important commodities will have the effect of destroying the parity concept, eliminating the farmers' opportunity to balance supply with demand, eliminate the loan program as an effective device for farmer bargaining, and will substantailly reduce farm income.

"The proposals which apparently have the support of the Administration and the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, provide for a sliding scale loan or soft floor under prices, but a rigid ceiling on farm prices. By eliminating the parity concept, which has been a vital part of farm programs for 37 years, the Administration Bill will prevent farmers from receiving increases in price proportionate to their cost of production. Parity has measured farm income with the well-being of the rest of the economy and provided farmers with an escalator clause as a cushion against inflation.

"The open-end production which is permitted under the set--aside program will doubtlessly result in overproduction and lower market prices. This concession to the processor and handler will assure him inflated profits on farm commodities and will doubtlessly result in an excessive build up of farm products.

"The loan as an effective device to give farmers leverage in negotiating price with buyers is completely eliminated from the Administration's program. The members of the subcommittees of the House Agriculture Committee in voting for these proposals must have forgotten the dirt cheap prices for farm commodities which existed before the loan program was built into the farm programs to support price. The flexible loan with a soft floor will remove any opportunity commodity producers might have to exercise bargaining power in the marketplace.

I have repeatedly suggested to spokesmen for this Coalition that if they would sit down and show me where the votes were to pass their bill that I would support it. So far no one has even tried to show what Members will provide the votes to pass their bill. In other words, I am just as eager as they are to secure the best deal possible for farmers, but I am not willing to give up $3 billion for my farmers just in order to have a political issue.

Area Car Dealers To Attend Convention

Three prominent Central Texas automobile dealers are expected to join some 1,000 delegates to the 53rd annual Texas Automobile Dealers Association convention in San Antonio, April 26 through 28.

Area dealers scheduled to attend the convention include R. J. Woodum of Cameron, W. P. Hogan and E. A. Miller of Rockdale.

These dealers will join a record number of other Texas car dealers to participate in business, workshop, and social sessions during the three-day convention.

ASCS News

By Alva E. Sanders

Marketing quotas for the 1971-72 wheat crop may be announced in April because the Agricultural Act of 1965, as amended, ends with the 1970 crop.

The 1965 Act suspended marketing quotas for wheat producers only while the Act was in effect. In the absence of new legislation, wheat programs revert to provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

Under the 1938 Act, the Secretary of Agriculture must determine before April 15 each year whether or not a national wheat marketing quota should be in effect for the following marketing year, in this case, the 1971 crop.

If the Secretary determines that a marketing quota is needed, a referendum of wheat producers would then be necessary before August 1, 1970. Marketing quotas must be approved by at least two-thirds of the eligible producers who vote. Quotas would then limit wheat acreage a farmer can plant for market without penalty.

The last time a similar situation arose was in 1965. That year the Secretary proclaimed a wheat marketing quota referendum on April 14, 1965, but it was delayed by Congressional resolutions and the 1965 Agricultural Act became law the following November.

Guaranteed Wage Draws Criticism

Cong. W. R. (Bob) Poage said this week that he voted against the guaranteed annual wage bill that passed the house Thursday by a 243 to 155 vote.

Poage said as the bill was written a minimum wage would be paid by the Government, whether the recipient works or not. "I think what we need is a guaranteed job for everybody who is capable of working and direct assistance for all those who are not able to work," he said.

"I know that you will be told that this bill, which had the support of both the Republican and Democrat leadership would require people to work," Poage said. "I challenge you to read the bill and find the provisions that will require this.

"You will be told that the Committee (Ways and Means) indicated that the bill would cost four and one half billion dollars a year. I submit that within three years the program will be costing three times this much."

'The Eyes Have It' For Driving Safety

"I just didn't see the other car."

How many times has a motorist stood near an accident scene and offered this rather pitiful excuse for being involved in the crash?

"Accident investigation officers hear it all the time," says Paul Graham, President, Texas Motor Transportation Association, "and it just points up one of the most important aids to safe driving. They're called 'eyes.' The trouble is, too many drivers just don't use them properly."

Professional drivers -- the men who haul the nation's goods in tractor-trailers -- know how to use their eyes. "They use them to get the big picture," Graham says. "And they automatically have a much bigger picture than the automobile driver -- they sit up much higher and therefore can see much farther ahead."

There are five common distractions that can get in the way of that big picture, according to Graham. They are:

1. Route problems -- confusion over where one is and where one is going.
2. Mental disturbances -- concentrating on the "problems of life" rather than the problems of the road.
3. Distractions inside the vehicle -- children, for example.
4. Scenery.
5. Unfamiliar situations.

"However, offsetting these are five basic steps used and proved out over the years by the professional drivers," Graham says.

"They are easy to learn. With a little practice they will become routine:

1. The 'aim high in steering' formula. This calls for repeated glances well ahead at the center of the intended driving lane. The eyes should sweep over the scene -- a full block in the city, a half-mile on rural roads.
2. Get the big picture. Keep your eyes sweeping over the scene, while maintaining proper spacing -- more than one car length for each 10 miles per hour in speed. And get into the ground-viewing habit. This refers to the habit of glancing at the ground beside the front wheel of another vehicle before overtaking to pass or before meeting oncoming cars.
3. Keep your eyes moving. Shift your eyes every two seconds. Check your rear-view and side-view mirrors at least every five seconds.
4. Leave yourself an 'out'. Think ahead. Strive for a space cushion, adjust speed to visibility and in doubtful situations reduce speed and touch brakes.
5. Always be certain that the other drivers see you. That's what horns, lights, and turn signals are for.

Ray Resistant

People living in homes built of wood receive "significantly less radiation exposure" than do those in houses made of block, brick, stone or other materials. This is indicated by research in New England by Harvard university's Department of Environmental Health Sciences.

For Emergencies

Why are prescriptions and fire extinguishers alike?

Because no one appreciates their value until they need them! People don't think much about fire extinguishers until a fire starts. In the same way, folks seldom think about medicine until they're sick. Then they want it--and fast!

That's where we come in! Our pharmacy staff can fill your doctor's prescription carefully, accurately, and promptly with whatever modern drug is needed.

We're proud to be a member of the health team whose aim is to keep you and your family well. We'll be at your service whenever you need us.

'Macbeth' Opera To Be Presented By Baylor U

A special matinee of Baylor University's opera "Macbeth" will be presented for junior and senior high school students at 3 p.m., April 27 in Waco Hall on the Baylor campus.

The opera by Ernest Bloch also will be presented at 8 p.m., April 23, 25, 28, 30 and May 2 by the Baylor Opera Workshop and Baylor Symphony Orchestra. It will be the first performance in the Eastern United States of the Swiss-American composer's only opera.

Reserved tickets will be $3. General admission tickets will be $2 for adults and $1 for students and military servicemen. Information and tickets may be obtained from the Baylor School of Music office in Waco Hall.

Tickets may also be obtained by mailing requests and a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Baylor Music school, Waco Hall, Baylor University, Waco, 76706.

Tickets for the April 27 matinee will be 50¢. Only junior and senior high school students and their teachers will be admitted to the matinee.

The opera's libretto was adapted by Edmond Fleg from Shakespeare's tragedy and retranslated by Bloch. The opera is closely related to Shakespeare's text, with only minor cuts in order that the opera not be too long.

Under the musical direction of Daniel Sternberg, dean of the Baylor music school, the Baylor Symphony Orchestra will play the musical score. A 70-voice chorus will perform both on-stage and off-stage singing.

WORKSHOP FOR SCHOOL BOARDS HELD AT TEMPLE

TEMPLE

Central Texas school board members and superintendents met Thursday at Temple High School to discuss "Legal Guidelines for School Board Operation."

The meeting was co-sponsored by the Texas Association of School Boards and The University of Texas Department of Educational Administration.

William Gibson, professor in The University of Texas School of Law, spoke at a dinner for workshop participants at 6 p.m. in the high school cafeteria. Gibson's topic was "The Law and School Board Authority."

Afternoon sessions emphasized particular problem areas in school law including students' rights, issuance and sale of school bonds, tort claims, financing education and formulating educational programs.

The workshop program is designed to increase the school board member's knowledge regarding board authority and limitations as both are defined by law.

Unemployment Continues Rise To 4.4 In March

WASHINGTON

Unemployment continued to increase in March, as a substantial rise in the civilian labor force exceeded a moderate gain in employment, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported.

The over-the-month increase in unemployment was concentrated among adults seeking full-time jobs, while the increase in employment occurred among part-time workers.

The overall unemployment rate rose from 4.2 percent in February to 4.4 percent in March.

Nonfarm payroll employment (seasonally adjusted) remained substantially unchanged at its high Frebruary level. In manufacturing, employment continued to edge down, but the factory work-week recovered from the sharp drop in February.

The number of unemployed persons totaled 3.7 million in March.

Unemployment generally falls sharply between February and March; this March, however, there was little change, and, after seasonal adjustment, unemployment was up by 230,000. Virtually all of the over-the-month increase occurred among adult full-time workers, mostly women.

Compared with March 1969, when joblessness was near its post-Korean low, unemployment has risen by 1.0 million. About three-fifths of the overall increase was among persons who lost their last job.

The unemployment rate for adult women moved up from 4.1 to 4.5 percent over the month, due to increased joblessness among women 25 years and over. Their rate was at its highest level in 2-1/2 years and has risen one percentage point since late 1969.

The March increase in the overall unemployment rate, from 4.2 to 4.4 percent, marked the third consecutive month in which the rate has risen. Since December, the rate has increased by nearly a full percentage point to a 4-1/2-year high.

For all adult men, the March unemployment rate of 2.9 percent was little changed from February. The rate for married men, however, continued to rise, advancing from 2.0 to 2.2 percent. Both of these rates have increased shaply since late 1969.

The jobless rate for teenagers, at 13.9 percent, remained at the January and February level. Teenage joblessness in the past few months has been slightly above the rates that prevailed throughout most of 1969.

FLUFF BLANKETS

If your big woolly blanket has lost some of its warmth, a fluffing may help. The nap, when raised, acts as thousands of little cells to trap warm air. With use, the nap tends to flatten into the surface of the blanket which then loses its capacity to retain warmth. A drycleaner can steam-finish and brush nap to raise it.

More Vo-Ed Is Needed, Says Kubiak

More vocational education programs should be used by local school districts and teachers, Rep. Dan Kubiak emphasized in his newsletter this week.

The programs are needed both for economic reasons and to "re-establish our basic concept of the dignity of work and the right of every person to reach for his own destiny," the legislator said.

"Too long we have held the philosophy that every student must obtain a four-year degree while only about 30 percent secure a college degree," he continued. "We must look out for the remaining 70 percent who have little or no preparation."

In other legislative news, Kubiak said one of the major concerns in Texas and America is the soaring costs of medical insurance and medical costs in general.

"We are making all types of studies on this problem and will report the findings before the 62nd Legislature convenes. . . we find that there are critical problems on both sides of the fence."

Rep. Kubiak noted that Gov. Smith opened a one-day drug abuse seminar in Austin last Monday. Smith advised Texans to "enter into a world of reality and reason" in a war on drug abuse.

"It is our feeling," Kubiak said, "that if we reduce penalties for possession, that marijuana usage would increase and we oppose this." He said a careful examination should be made of all programs -- research, enforcement, education, etc. -- to try and alleviate the problem.

Luckey Dies; Was R'dale Civic Leader

Don C. Luckey, 58, lifelong resident and prominent businessman and civic leader of Rockdale, died Sunday night in an Austin hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Luckey, who actively supported athletic programs for youth in the Rockdale schools, was a partner in Phillips and Luckey Co. funeral homes in Caldwell, Giddings and Rockdale. He was a director of the Rockdale State Bank and a member of the Texas Burial Association Rate Board. He had been in business in Rockdale for the past 35 years.

He was a member of St. John's Methodist Church and of the Rockdale Chamber of Commerce.

Funeral service was held at 4 p.m. Tuesday at Phillips and Luckey Funeral Home chapel in Rockdale, the Rev. J. Stewart Bell and Minister Milton Pogue officiating. Burial was in the IOOF Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Betty Jane Luckey; three sons, Donald Luckey of Silver Springs, Md., Robert Luckey of Hartsdale, N.Y., and Randall Luckey of Rockdale; a daughter, Rebecca Luckey of Rockdale; three brothers, D. E. Luckey of Fort Worth, Harold M. Luckey and Edward Luckey, both of Rockdale; and a sister, Mrs. Alex McLeod of Rockdale.

Pallbearers were Edward Batlett Jr., Thomas Offield, Bennie D. Williams, W. P. Hogan, Emory Camp, Sammie Perry and Dr. John T. Richards.

CPI Reports Progress In Fabrics, Weevil Control

DALLAS

The Board also heard progress reports from committees and research and promotion personnel.

Ernest Stewart of the promotion staff reported that the fabric development program, which was started from scratch two years ago, "is making real headway."

"Working in close coordination with the research division and with and through some of the country's topflight converters, we are coming up with new cotton fabrics of which you can be proud. More importantly, these fabrics are attracting the attention of garment manufacturers not just as conversation pieces but as fabrics they are eager to put into their lines," Stewart said.

In the cooperative advertising and promotion programs with one category of manufacturers, CPI is supplying about $460,000 this spring. These manufacturers will add about $1,700,000 to the program, "so someone else is putting up four dollars for every cotton dollar spent," he said.

RESEARCH

George S. Buck of the research staff said that the recent approval of Temik and its availability to producers "mean that cotton farmers are beginning to reap a real harvest from their dollars invested in CPI research."

Temik, a systemic insecticide which controls boll-weevils and a number of other pests, is the result of one of the first research projects established by CPI. He stressed the importance of continuing the program in an effort to find systemics which will control bollworms and pink bollworms.

"The restrictive attitude on the part of government officials toward chemicals and farm pesticides in general makes it even more significant that CPI is already deeply involved in research directed toward other methods of control," Buck said.

Work is well advanced on mass rearing of enormous numbers of enemies of the bollworm and pink bollworm. These enemies will be turned loose in cotton fields as needed for control. Also showing progress is research on naturally resistant plants and on juvenile hormones that fatally disrupt the life cycle of worms.

Do you put a higher price on an Olds than we do?

Our own surveys indicate that quite a few people think an Olds costs a lot more than it really does. Result? Many people buy an ordinary car and end up with a lot less car and value for their money.

It's so unnecessary, too, because Oldsmobile has many models that are priced right down with so-called low-priced cars. See your Olds dealer. He'll prove that you're closer to Olds than you think.

Wood Cheaper In Foundation

An all-weather wood foundation system built under an industry - government study costs $280 less than a typical block system, reports the National Home Builders Research Foundation.

Four houses were built in Lexington Park, Md. as basis for the comparative study. Pressure-treated lumber was used, and sections were shop - fabricated, the report explained.

To erect the wood foundation required 30.4 man hours, only a little over one-third that needed for the block system. FHA insured the loan commitment.
